This open-volume kitchen is part of a modern barn addition to a cape-style house in North Haven. The new space melds beautifully with the dining and living area, thanks to high-gloss paint on the ceiling and light from multiple sources. Judge Paul Goldberger says, "The open shelving and farmhouse look blend gracefully with a modern aesthetic." Another unifying element: a top shelf that wraps the circumference of the kitchen and works its way into the dining area. "The room feels warm and cozy," says judge Madeline Weinrib.

Given this Bridgehampton kitchen's unimpeded ocean views and inviting surfaces, it's likely every meal cooked and served here tastes delicious. The space occupies a 50-foot-long expanse, the north and south sides of which are fully fenestrated. (The appliances and most cabinetry have been relegated to the east and west sides.) The preparation surfaces even double as buffet tables for the clients, a sizable family that entertains often, yet the minimal aesthetic makes the kitchen seem to disappear when it's not in use.
